Grammar: separable verbs

There is a special group of verbs in German called separable verbs. Luckily, they are easy to spot - they have an extra bit at the front, which is called a prefix. E.g. anrufen (literally to call/ring up)

When separable verbs appear in a present tense sentence, the verb separates and prefix part goes to the end of the clause.

e.g. ich rufe meine Freunde an

Phonics:

German words with sch, sp or st at the start usually sound like sh, shp and sht unless the word has been borrowed from English.

- Schreiben 'sh-reiben'
- Spielkonsole –'shp-ielkonsole'
- Schicke – sh-icke

Words that are pronounced as they are in English:

- Smartphone
- streame
- Stars
